City of Round Rock, Library Assistant, Youth Services, Supplemental Answers (as submitted 20 Oct 2026)

Which of the following best describes your highest level of education?

Bachelor's degree.

How many years of work experience do you have in a customer service field and/or library setting?

More than two (2) years.

Please describe your work experience in a customer service field and/or library setting.

Library setting: At the University of Austin I was the on-site point of contact for donor tours of the campus library, guiding groups of all ages, answering questions about the collections, and helping guests locate materials and service areas. I also handled intake and documentation of the book donations the library was being built from, including a complete Harvard Classics set. This was not a paid library position, but it was public-facing work inside a library.

Customer service: As a student registrar at Chapman University's Fowler School of Law I staffed the service window as the front-line contact, assisting students in person and by phone, explaining procedures that were not obvious, making referrals, and processing more than 500 exam records, transcripts and bar documents. At Young Americans for Liberty I spent more than two years as Donor Services Director, where I managed a portfolio of 320 donors, answered their inquiries by phone and email, resolved account issues, and coordinated check-in and on-site logistics for conferences serving up to 1,000 attendees.

Are you bilingual? If so, indicate the languages below.

n/a

Do you have experience working with youth and families?

Yes.

Please describe your experience working with youth and families.

Yes, with young adults rather than with children and families. At Young Americans for Liberty I was West Deputy Regional Director, supervising six state chairs across four states. YAL is a civic education nonprofit that teaches college students about state legislative processes, parliamentary procedure and local government through campus chapters. I recruited students into our conferences and programs, bringing in more than 115 applications and over 50 registrations for the 2023 national convention, coordinated their travel, trained student leaders and volunteers to run events themselves, and met weekly with the chairs I supervised. Before that, as California State Chair, I organized and ran more than 30 events and recruitment drives and handled communication with over 400 members.

At the University of Austin I worked with students directly in a different way. I sourced their stories for donor-facing materials, which meant sitting down with them, drawing out what they were working on and what the university had actually done for them, and putting it into something a reader outside the school would understand. I also led visitor tours of the campus library there, hosting groups of mixed ages and adapting as I went depending on who was in front of me.

The people I worked with were college age, not children and not their families. What transfers is planning and running programs for young people who turned up voluntarily, training first-timers to run something themselves, and adjusting when the room in front of me was not the room I had planned for.

Two figures here were corrected afterwards. The 400+ members belong to the West Deputy Regional Director role; California State Chair was 90+ dues-paying members. And the chapters were across Arizona, Nevada and California, not four states. If they interview, use the corrected version.

The work hours for this position will include nights and weekends as needed for program operations. Are you able to work nights and weekends?

Yes.
