City of Yorba Linda, Library Clerk, Supplemental Answers (as submitted 19 Oct 2026)

This position requires you to be a United States Citizen or National and be able to pass the Department of State Passport Acceptance Agent Training for New Agents. Do you meet those qualifications?

Yes.

Describe your experience working in a fast-paced position where you regularly engaged with members of the public.

For a year I staffed the registrar service window at Chapman University's Fowler School of Law. I was the first person students reached, and the window stayed busy: people arrived needing transcripts, exam records and bar documentation, often close to a deadline and often already frustrated. The work was answering questions in person and by phone, explaining procedures that were not obvious, handling confidential records correctly, and knowing when to refer someone elsewhere rather than guess.

Alongside that I processed and approved over five hundred exam records, transcripts and bar documents in PeopleSoft. Accuracy mattered in a way that concentrated the mind, because a record filed wrong could delay someone's graduation or bar eligibility. I also proctored examinations, including individually proctored sittings for students with accommodations, which meant following a procedure exactly while keeping the room calm.

More recently I have spent four years in nonprofit development, in one of the roles I spent a year assisting between 150 and 320 constituents by phone and email and coordinating check-in and on-site operations for events of up to a thousand people. The constant across all of it is being the person in front of the public when something needs sorting out.

What I took from the registrar window, and what I would bring to a circulation desk, is that accuracy and courtesy are the same skill under pressure. People remember whether you took them seriously.

This position requires a regularly scheduled weekend day and may include evening hours based on operational needs. Do you confirm that you are available to meet them?

Yes.
